

Vitamin-Mineral Immune System IV Therapy Infusions

There are times when for whatever reason stress, nutritional deficiencies, medical conditions the immune system is not able to function at its highest and best level. At such times the individual may feel various symptoms from fatigue to down right collapse. At other times the immune system may have problems resisting the advances of acute illness, age-related diseases, chronic illnesses and diseases.

Vitamin-Mineral Immune System IV can play a role in helping patients move toward optimal health. Often because of excessive stress, illness or nutritional deficiencies vitamin-mineral, amino acids, and other natural agents are used up or diminished and are therefore no longer available or ready to support the needs of the immune system in protecting, preventing and fighting illness. In such cases fully relying on the oral vitamins and minerals and essential nutrients arriving immediately may be fanciful. In other situations the levels of vitamins and minerals and other essential nutrients may be needed in at extremely high levels in order for deficiencies and defects to be resolved. Once again, relying on oral therapy may be of little value

In still other cases the digestive system may not be the best way to bring these nutrients into the body. In such situations the intravenous infusion of high concentrations of essential nutrients may be the only way to get the job done, to obtain the optimally nutrient levels necessary to nourish the cells and tissues of the body. A simple way of stating this is that "IV vitamins, minerals and essential nutrients can go directly to where they are needed and through this method they can treat many of the inadequacies and malfunctions that undermine our body, and they can work on the problems the patient is suffering from faster and more efficiently than through oral therapy.

Supporting Your Immune System

Our immune system acts to protect us against viruses, bacteria, and other pathogens that can cause infection and injure us. The immune system keeps us free not only from serious infections but also cancer and autoimmune disorders like lupus and rheumatoid arthritis and other conditions in which an immune system attacks the body's own healthy cells. As we age it appears that in many people this gets to be a bigger problem, possibly because of the aging process or possibly because the nutrition of the immune system fails. Because of this many people are hit harder by these immune-related conditions.

With most illness and disease nutrients play well-defined roles in the ability of the immune system to respond and act effectively. Beside the mechanics of the immune system itself a number of nutrients play essential parallel support roles. For example antioxidants, vitamins, and minerals also are essential in cellular metabolism, tissue security and protection against dangerous chemical reactions. For individuals suffering from immune disorders, or in fact anyone who just needs an immune boost vitamin-minerals essential nutrient immune drip therapy can be valuable and protective. Our immune drips consist of antioxidants, vitamins, and minerals. High doses of vitamins cannot be absorbed orally but can be administered intravenously. Many people do not absorb adequate vitamins or minerals and high levels are needed for free radical generated illness, infections and fatigue. This can be safely and easily administered intravenously in what is termed immune drips.
